Thirteen policies pertaining to employment and social protection are reviewed in this document. The details of the policy measures are examined, with examples of countries having applied them, an indication of likely coverage, and some analysis of the rationale of the policy in relation to the crisis and the recovery. They are grouped in three parts: social protection, employment and training and labour demand. The policies reviewed in this document are essentially those identified in the Global Jobs Pact adopted by the International Labour Conference in June 2009
