Analítica

Vilma Espín Guillois was part of a group of women who were absolutely essential for the Cuban Revolution. This article tries to underscore her career and thought before the triumph, with special attention to her own testimonies about this time. A pioneer in industrial chemical engineering in the Cuban island, the beginning of Fulgencio Batista's dictatorship and the suspension of constitutional rights were the spur that pushed her to political and student protest. Tireless and tenacious, she was the lieutenant of Frank País and the provincial coordinator of the July 26 Movement for her request a short time before her death. When her situation was unsustainable in the city of Santiago de Cuba, she marched to the mountains, applying her skills and acquiring new ones at the service of the Eastern Second Front "Frank País García" of the Cuban Revolution.
