Monografía

Drawing upon Walt Kuhn's work and voluminous personal correspondence, Philip Rhys Adams traces the personal events and artistic episodes of a life and career inextricably conjoined with the principal developments in the world of art they paralleled. He establishes Kuhn's relations with fellow artists, including the masters of post-impressionism in Europe and the rebellious group that became known as the Association of American Painters and Sculptors, and assesses the crucial role that Kuhn played in mounting the famed Armory Show in 1913.
