Review: To provide an introduction for the study of the General Part of Spanish Criminal law is a very difficult task, because this substantive Criminal law was elaborated under the influence of German doctrine and, therefore, suffered an elephantiasis development, which, in practice, is of little use, because to know the Spanish Criminal law is to know the Penal Code and the legal decisions of judges who apply it. [...] Prof. Elena Górriz has chosen to expound, schematically, the basic concepts that are necessary to understand the Penal Codes regulation and to reduce to a minimum doctrinal discussions and jurisprudential references, in particular because those references suffer from many, and perhaps too frequent, changes.
