Reexamines the relationship between humans and wolves. Over centuries Europeans' hatred of wolves grew as farms and livestock grazing lands replaced forests, squeezing the wolf's natural habitat. When Europeans came to the Americas, they brought their legends, myths, and fear of wolves with them. But the attitudes of the native peoples of North America toward wolves was vastly different. Which view of the wolf is true? Are they bloodthirsty or benevolent? What is their role in the ecosystem? What is a proper relationship between humans and this predator species?
